Washington Women in Trades work matters, not just to the individual women, but to our whole community.

Who We Are

Washington Women in Trades (WWIT) is a community based, non-profit 501 (c)(3) organization whose mission is to improve women's economic equity and self-sufficiency through access and success in high-wage, high-skilled careers in the construction, manufacturing and transportation sector.

Now in it's 43rd year, this all-volunteer organization has established itself as a group of industry experts who facilitate connections between the working woman, the 'wanting-to-be-working' woman, prospective employers and government agencies. We have educated students about women in non-traditional trades through attendance at school career days, participation in community events and conferences. We have encouraged networking, established scholarships and counseled women through difficult work issues. Through hard work and partnership, we have had much success. While we enjoy celebrating that success, we have much more to do toward helping women both attain and retain high-wage, high-skilled careers.

What We Do

Our most publicly visible project is the Washington Women In Trades Fair held every spring at Seattle Center. Essentially an educational tool to introduce young women and the general public to the trades, the event hosts over 100 exhibitors and has an annual attendance of approximately 1,000 students and work-ready women. The fair features apprenticeship and resource information, hands-on demonstrations, workshops and career opportunities.

The Annual Dream Big Dinner is an awards banquet and celebration of Tradeswomen. Approximately 10 people are honored each year with winners selected from scores of nominations submitted by peers, managers, friends and family.

We offer meaningful volunteer opportunities such as the Women4Women Tiny House Project. Our Facebook page is a lively spot where tradeswomen can swap stories and share information. Finally, our website, in addition to providing basic information and resources, offers free job board listings to any businesses, agencies or organizations who'd like to participate. It also features a tradeswoman directory—a place where the general public can find women owned businesses for construction/home remodels and more.

Membership

The Washington Women in Trades Association meets monthly from September through April in the downtown Seattle area. Meetings include planning events, networking, sharing a meal and enjoying each other's company. Formal/Annual membership is available. For more info, visit our website: www.wawomenintrades.com
